CATARRH!

Five Years' Sickness Cured by Four Bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy.

Pain in Shoulders, Back and Lungs,
and Droppings in Throat Disappear.

ST. AM AND, P. Q., Sept. 12, 1876.

MR. T. J. B. HARDING,
DEAR SIR:—Being desirous that others may know something of the merits of your CON-STITUTIONAL REMEDY, I wish to inform you what it has done for me. I am twenty-nine years old; had been out of health for about five years. I had employed three or four different doctors, and tried various medicines,
without receiving any permanent benefit, but
continued rather to grow worse, until last fall, when I had become so bad as to be unable to do an hour's work at a time. Had severe sore-ness and pain under the shoulder blades and
through the shoulders, with very lame back,
and a feeling in my right lung as though there was a weight bearing it down, with continual dropping in the throat and down upon the lungs. Such was my condition when I commenced to take your Catarrh Remedy, one bottle of which eased my pains and gave me an improved appetite, and after taking four bottles I was restored to health so as to be able to toil hard and continued labor, such as chopping and clearing land, at which I have been engaged the past season. My recovery I attribute solely, with God's blessing, to the use of your Catarrh Remedy.
Yours truly HENRY NIDER.

REMEMBER—HE'S A MAN.

When you see a wasted form
And want's uplifted eye,
Think you are his fellow worm,
Before you pass him by;
Never scorn pompous pride,
But raise him if you can;
Soon you may be side by side—
Remember—he's a man.

When you see a drunkard sot
From out the tavern reel,
Be thankful of your better lot,
And turn not on your heel;
Go, warn him of the dreadful glass,
And save him if you can;
But never scorn him as you pass—
Remember—he's a man.

When you see a colored skin,
Oh! speak in kindly tone;
Perchance a heart may beat therein
More tender than your own;
'Tis true he was with fetters born,
But break them if you can,
And give him not one look of scorn—
Remember—he's a man.

When you see "the rough, hard hand,"
Besmeared with daily toil,
Oh! never at a distance stand,
For fear that I should soil.
He will not bear to be despised,
The meanest never can,
Or even to be "patronized"—
Remember—he's a man.

When'er you meet, in life's rough track,
A brother gone astray
Stretch forth a hand to bring him back—
Turn not the other way;
There is no shame in humble birth,
Then help it when you can;
And e'en the meanest wretch on earth—
Remember—he's a man.

THE CAPTAIN'S SACRIFICE.

Two years passed, and the captain of the Flying Arrow was captain of a propeller which brought passengers merchandise from the upper lakes. Those who knew him best were aware that he was pressed down by some great sorrow, but no one had known his grief except his mother. He had told her his story, and she fell upon his neck and wept for him, "as one whom his mother had comforted." But she was now at rest.

The propeller was passing out of the last lock in the Welland, and George was forward, watching her carefully, when passengers came on board. He had not time to attend to them then; but when the boat was fairly out of Dalhousie, and the mate could take care of her, he went into the dining saloon, for the dinner bell was ringing. They had few first-cabin passengers that day, though the steerage was full to overflowing. Most of these had already taken their seats, and George had begun to carve the meat, when the door leading to the ladies' cabin opened, and a young men. If the ladies had never called the lake, I wouldn't blame them so much. But—I don't like this. Go into the cabin."

The wind began to rise in fitful gusts, and the steamer was rushing through the water at her best speed, the foam piling itself in great masses about her entrance. Below, the great heart throbbed and beat, while the firemen, smoke-begrimed and perspiring, piled wood in the furnace, and the engineer obeyed the order which came through the speaking tube to put on speed. Night came on, and the waves seemed to go down for a moment, and it was almost a calm, and then, without a moment's warning, the squall struck them on the beam. Many a sailing craft went down in that fierce gust, and even the steamer felt it. As she heeled to leeward, and every thing upon the windward side went thundering across the deck, a wail of despair was heard among the passengers. But, in obedience to the captain's order, the steamer's course was changed so that its bow pointed "into the wind's eye," while the fierce squall roared about her, and a watery deluge swept across her decks. George Manly, drenched by the icy flood, but bold and confident, kept his station behind the wheel-house, holding in one hand the speaking tube, and in the other a trumpet, for in the roar of the elements no human voice could have any power. A confused shout arose as a crowd of drenched passengers came rushing forward.

"Silence there, fore and aft!" cried the young sailor. "Watkins, take those people aft. What do they mean by this conduct when we are busy?"

The mate drove his confused flock before him to the after-cabin, locked them in, and pocketed the key, in spite of their remonstrances. He knew that they were safe if in that dark night they did not meet some other craft upward bound. The captain kept his lights up, the pyramid of colored lamps which tells of the coming of a steamer, and anxiously watched for those other lights which he must avoid. Sea after sea deluged them, and swept the deck clean of every thing not secure; but the sturdy sailors laughed at them. George called the first mate to his place, gave him the trumpet, and went into his cabin, for a night-glass, when he was aware that some one was sitting on a stool in the forward cabin looking out at the window, and trying in vain to pierce the thickness beyond.

"Who is this?" he said.

"It is I, George," said the musical voice he had so loved to hear. "I could not say in the cabin among the crowd of frightened people. Let me stay here."

"If you like it better," he answered. "Where is the child, and Gale?"

"They are in the cabin. Gale is not afraid, and is trying to calm those poor frightened souls. He is a brave man, George."

"I know it," said George, slowly. "I—"

Crash! Every thing seemed to reel as this wall long ago, and carried it him, directed to her. He had written pencil beneath it, "Teach the little to think kindly of the man whose he bears." Myra never forgot that proud in the after-days her son reverent memory of no man more than that young hero who died in the dark that other lives might be saved.

THE END.

THE PHYSIQUE OF CANADIAN
(From Brown's "Emigrant and Sp man in Canada.")

A comparison between the climate the United States and of Canada, as amplified by the physique and appearances of the people, is very strongly in favor of the latter climate. A climate suitable to the forest, as we have seen also that one most suitable to the growth of grasses and to the health of cattle. is also most favourable to man, who appears to benefit by a certain amount of humidity in the atmosphere as much as the forest tree. Thus the natives of forest regions in North America are robust and ruddy, while those of the treeless regions are lanky and yellow. The world cannot produce specimens of manhood than are to be met with in the backwoods of Canada, more especially in the lumber districts. Canadian born men are, if anything, harder than the Old Country people, and more especially in the lumber districts. They are hardy, robust, and vigorous, presenting a very striking contrast to their next neighbors.

Although the colonies are better known and more thought about in the Old Country than they were a short time ago, there is a certain amount of mist to be cleared away. Untravelled and unthorough Englishmen are apt to suppose that because the two countries lie side by side on the map of the New World, separated through many degrees by only an imaginary boundary line, that therefore citizens of Canada and of the United States must be almost identical in physique, appearance, habits, character, and so on. There cannot be a greater mistake. Canadians are simply Englishmen who have been taken out of the nursery and transplanted into a new field. The strongest plants are generally chosen by the gardener for planting out, so emigration it is generally the men of most strength, spirit, energy, and ambition that leave the Old Country to pursue their fortunes in the new. Conquer the wilderness and make homesteads of it, is an occupation calculated to stimulate, and not to subdue, those qualities of mind and body, such as self-reliance, energy, patience, on the one hand, and hardness, strength, and activity on the other, which are supposed to be characteristics of Englishmen. There is much difference between the United States citizen and the Canadian, as between the Englishman and the Frenchman. By blood the American of the

had not time to attend to them then; but when the boat was fairly out of Dalhousie, and the mate could take care of the dinner bell was ringing. They had few first-cabin passengers that day,

though the steerage was full to overflowing. Most of these had already taken their seats, and George had begun to carve the meat, when the door leading to the ladies' cabin opened, and a gentleman came in, followed by a lady. The carving-knife dropped from George Manly's hand; for Myra stood before him, with the flush of happiness upon her cheek, and her eyes dancing with fun as they sought out George's face.
They came forward, and he rose quickly,
and greeted them as if they had been his brother and sister. Myra was happily glad to see him, and asked him
questions of her old home, her father,
and friends, and George answered her as well as he could. He could not see that she had changed in any respect—a little more matronly in figure, perhaps, but nothing more. Her eyes had the same old light in them which he remembered
so well, and her voice was as sweet as ever. When dinner was over, Myra rose with an important air, and beckoned
George to come.

"I have something to show you, Sir.
You are to come with me at once, and tell me what you think."

George followed her mechanically into the ladies' cabin. A nurse sat upon a sofa near the upper end of the cabin,
holding in her arms a baby—Myra's child. The young mother was down upon her knees beside it, pressing her lips
to the sweet mouth of the child, which crowded and stretched out its little hands
to her.

"Why don't you speak to him, George?"
she said, pouting. "You don't hardly look at him, you wicked creature, and you don't know what his name is."

"How could I know?" said George,
"I hope he has a good name."

"He has the name of a good man and a brave one," she answered.

"Your father's?"

"George Gale Merrick. Now what do you think of it? I would have it, George, because I want, when my little child is old enough to understand what I mean,
to point him out a model, and I want no
better one than I have found."

The little fellow was stretching out his hands to George, who could not resist the child's pleading gesture, and took the little fellow in his arms. His voice broke as he tried to speak.

"You don't know how I feel it," he said, "that you should name your little child after me. I am not likely to have one by my own fireside, and it will be something to remember with pleasure in my lonely voyage that somewhere on the earth there lives a child who bears
my name."

"George," said Myra, inexpressibly touched by the melancholy cadence of his voice, "why do you live a lonely life? There are dozens of girls I know who would be proud to be your wife."

Forward.

"Silence there, for a moment!" cried
the young sailor. "Watkins, take those people aft. What do they mean by this conduct when we are busy?"

The mate drove his confused flock before him to the after-cabin, locked them
in, and pocketed the key, in spite of their remonstrances. He knew that they were safe if in that dark night they did not meet some other craft upward bound.
The captain kept his lights up, the pyramid of colored lamps which tells of the coming of a steamer, and anxiously watched for those other lights which he must avoid. Sea after sea deluged them,
and swept the deck clean of every thing
not secure; but the sturdy sailors laughed at them. George called the first mate to his place, gave him the trumpet, and went into his cabin for a night-glass, when he was aware that some one was sitting on a stool in the forward cabin looking out at the window, and trying in vain to

"Who is this?" he said.

"It is I, George," said the musical voice
he had so loved to hear. "I could not

"If you like it better," he answered.

"Where is the child, and Gale?"

"They are in the cabin. Gale is not afraid, and is trying to calm those poor frightened souls. He is a brave man, George."

"I know it," said George, slowly. "I—"

"Crash! Every thing seemed to reel as a lightning stroke had touched the steamer and shivered her at once. A wild, piercing cry, heard above the roar
and rush of the tempest, a terrible, agonizing scream from half a hundred throats, told what had happened. Some unfortunate craft at the mercy of the waves, without lights, or unable to raise
them, had met the steamer in full career.

There can be no conception of the terrible forces of such a meeting. The crashing timber, the shrieks of brave men, rose above the turmoil of nature. Then the steamer reeled on, staggering like a drunken man, and the unfortunate craft
was blotted out. George had caught Myra, and held her close until the first tumult had subsided, and he felt the steamer gliding on unobstructed, when he released her, and rushed out into the sea, and took command of the steamer again. For two hours they rushed on,
and the storm subsided, when the mate
came to him, and whispered, in a horrified voice,

"We have sprung a leak!"

For a single instant the two men looked at each other in horrified surprise, and then George sprang for his trumpet. "To the pumps!" he cried. "Work with a
will, men!"

They worked as only men can who are fighting for their lives. But, fast as they labored, the water poured in faster than the pumps could draw it out. It gained,
inch by inch, and George hurried about,
preparing the boats for the salvation of the passengers. The storm had subsided as quickly as it rose, but though they now looked idly upon the waves, they felt that they were doomed.

"Get out the boats!" cried the sailors.

"Pumps can't save us. The steamer must go down."

They made a rush for the boat on the starboard quarter, but George Manly stood before it, a revolver in his hand,
and warned them sternly back: "I am captain of this boat yet, and my passengers shall be saved first, my crew next,
and myself last of all. But the man who lays a finger upon any of these boats, except I order it, is a dead man."

They quailed before the determined
captain, and when he called for certain ones to help lower away the boat, they quietly obeyed him. One by one frightened passengers descended, until there was only room left for the four rowers and
the mate who was to command the boat.

"Away with you," said George. "You've a compass, Watkins?"

"Ay, ay, Sir. God bless you, captain!"

The boat was pushed off, and the remaining one was lowered. It was larger than the one which had just left the star than the Old Country people, and fleshy; they are hardy, robust, and ous, presenting a very striking contrast to their next neighbors.

Although the colonies are better k
and more thought about in the Old C
try than they were a short time ago,
there is a certain amount of mist t
cleared away. Untravelled and unt ing Englishmen are apt to suppose because the two countries lie side by
on the map of the New World, sepa
through many degrees by only an i nary boundary line, that therefore citizens of Canada and of the U States must be almost identical in sique, appearance, habits, character,
so on. There cannot be a greater take. Canadians are simply Englis
who have been taken out of the nu
and transplanted into a new field.
the strongest plants are generally cl
by the gardner for planting out, s
emigration it is generally the me

their fortunes in the new. Conqu
the wilderness and make homesteads
of it, is an occupation calculated to st
late, and not to subdue, those quali-
mind and body, such as self-reli
energy, patience, on the one hand,
hardiness, strength, and activity on
other, which are supposed to be ch teristics of Englishmen. There is much difference between the U States citizen and the Canadian, as tween the Englishman and the Fre

Chinamen, the African, and the I

as well as he could. He could not see that she had changed in any respect—a little more matronly in figure, perhaps, but nothing more. Her eyes had the same old light in them which he remembered so well, and her voice was as sweet as ever. When dinner was over, Myra rose with an important air, and beckoned George to come.
"I have something to show you, Sir. You are to come with me at once, and tell me what you think."
George followed her mechanically into the ladies' cabin. A nurse sat upon a sofa near the upper end of the cabin, holding in her arms a baby—Myra's child. The young mother was down upon her knees beside it, pressing her lips to the sweet mouth of the child, which crowded and stretched out its little hands to her.
"Why don't you speak to him, George?" she said, pouting. "You don't hardly look at him, you wicked creature, and you don't know what his name is."
"How could I know?" said George. "I hope he has a good name."
"He has the name of a good man and a brave one," she answered.
"Your father's?"
"George Gale Merrick. Now what do you think of it? I would have it, George, because I want, when my little child is old enough to understand what I mean, to point him out a model, and I want no better one than I have found."
The little fellow was stretching out his hands to George, who could not resist the child's pleading gesture, and took the little fellow in his arms. His voice broke as he tried to speak.
"You don't know how I feel it," he said, "that you should name your little child after me. I am not likely to have one by my own fireside, and it will be something to remember with pleasure in my lonely voyages that somewhere on the earth there lives a child who bears my name."
"George," said Myra, inexpressibly touched by the melancholy cadence of his voice, "why do you live a lonely life? There are dozens of girls I know who would be proud to be your wife."
"It can never be," he said, gently. And the solemn way seemed to take up and sound the melancholy words. Myra had never dreamed of the true solution of George Manly's sorrow. In their intercourse she had looked at him as one immeasurably above her, to whom her childish chatter was simply amusing. But that he should have loved her! she would have laughed at the idea. Yet as she saw George standing there, gazing upon the sweet face of the child, an indefinable suggestion crossed her mind as to the cause of his gloom. Through the day he came to the cabin often; and once when Myra missed the child, the nurse told her that "the captain" had taken it on deck. She went out to look for him, and found him seated in the shadow of the cabin, the arms of the boy about his neck, and its little face pressed against his bearded cheek.
"I knew you had stolen him," said Myra. But the boy clung to his new protector, and crowded defiance to his mother. She drew a deck chair near the rail, looking out across the tranquil water. They were just steaming past Charlotte, and the long line of green coast lay bright before their eyes. George, looking at the northern sky, gave a sudden start, and a new trouble came into his face. He did not like the appearance of the sky. He had seen it look like that before terrific squalls, and he went away to prepare for danger. The sun set in a blazing sky, but it was the wrong kind of red—a lurid, fiery glare. The sailors shook their heads and looked significantly at each other. Myra, surprised by these strange glances, asked,
"What is the matter, George?"
"A capful of wind yonder, perhaps—nothing to speak of. You go into your cabin and never mind it. If there is any real danger, I will be first one to tell you, never fear. Take her into the cabin, Gale, and don't mind the chatter of my above the turmoil of nature. Then the steamer reeled on, staggering like a drunken man, and the unfortunate craft was blotted out. George had caught Myra, and held her close until the first tumult had subsided, and he felt the steamer gliding on unobstructed, when he released her, and rushed out into the night. He took command of the steamer again. For two hours they rushed on, and the storm subsided, when the mate came to him, and whispered, in a horrified voice,

"We have sprung a leak!"
For a single instant the two men looked at each other in horrified surprise, and then George sprang for his trumpet. "To the pumps!" he cried. "Work with a will, men!"
They worked as only men can who are fighting for their lives. But, fast as they labored, the water poured in faster than the pumps could draw it out. It gained, inch by inch, and George hurried about, preparing the boats for the salvation of the passengers. The storm had subsided as quickly as it rose, but though they now rocked idly upon the waves, they felt that they were doomed.
"Get out the boats!" cried the sailors. "Pumps can't save us. The steamer must go down."
They made a rush for the boat on the starboard quarter, but George Manly stood before it, a revolver in his hand, and warned them sternly back: "I am captain of this boat yet, and my passengers shall be saved first, my crew next, and myself last of all. But the man who lays a finger upon any of these boats, except I order it, is a dead man."
They quailed before the determined captain, and when he called for certain ones to help lower away the boat, they quietly obeyed him. One by one frightened passengers descended, until there was only room left for the four rowers and the mate who was to command the boat. "Away with you," said George. "You've a compass, Watkins?"
"Ay, ay, Sir. God bless you, captain!"
The boat was pushed off, and the remaining one was lowered. It was larger than the one which had just left the steamer, but not large enough to hold all. George, with his own hand, placed Myra in the boat, and put the child in her arms. No one remained upon the steamer except Myra's husband and Manly. The sailors began to grumble.
"Come along, cap. She is getting heavy. But both of you can't come in this boat; she won't stand it."
"I know it," said George, calmly. "I am not going with you. Gale Merrick get into that boat. The steamer will not be afloat in fifteen minutes."
"I will not go," said Gale.
"You must," replied George, almost fiercely. "And before you go I want you to take this letter. When you know that I am dead, give it to your wife. If I live, return it to me."
He thrust the sealed letter into the hand of the husband, and seizing him suddenly, forced him into the boat, and cast off the painter. The boat and steamer parted in the darkness, and George Manly remained upon the ill-fated craft, happy in the consciousness that he had heard her voice praying them to return and save him. He was glad they did not attempt it. The boat was loaded heavily already, and his weight would be too much. Climbing to the quarter-deck, he sat calmly down and awaited his fate. The last they saw of him, under the glare of the steamer's lamps, was his hands stretched out in a mute gesture of farewell. Living, no man ever saw him again, and it was two days after when they found his body upon the sands. When he was buried, Myra's husband brought the package which this brave man forced into his hand upon that fearful night, and opened it. He had written hastily in pencil,
"Myra—Farewell until the coming of a brighter morning."
Inclosed was a will, bequeathing all his property to Myra. He had made the Canadian, but with the hands of a Chinaman, the African, and the man.

I suppose in considering the future of the two peoples, an ethnologist would study the woman more than the man. There is quite as great a difference between the American women and Canadian women as between the American women who have not to for they object to any sort of exercise except, perhaps dancing. They never walk nor ride. They go by rail and in carriages. They object even to work of looking after and superintending a house, and on that account prefer to live in hotels. Those who are obliged to work for their living do so as school teachers, as clerks in post offices, in any way in fact where physical exercise can be dispensed with. The American woman has perfectly regular rather sharp features, and when young is undoubtedly very pretty, but the bloom, however rapidly fades, and she is an old woman at thirty. She has only one, or at most two children. The Canadian woman is a marked contrast. She is, in appearance, quite an Englishwoman—generally a blonde. Canadian ladies are fully as much addicted to outdoor pursuits and amusements as English ladies. Even in the depths of winter they have their walks on their snow shoes, their skating parties. Thanks to more healthy modes of life, to their robust constitutions, and to their healthy children they preserve their good looks to the last. As to the poorer woman in Canada, they have no Chinamen, negroes, or men to work for them and so they are compelled to attend to their own household and dairies, and this seems to do well with them. Unlike the American woman there seems to be no limit to their finery and no end to their good looks, the middle-aged Canadian woman (if an expression can be applied to the sex) presents as great a contrast to worn-out and faded American women as a similar unmentionable age can possibly be imagined.
THE QUEEN ON THE EDUCATION OF HER DAUGHTER.
"I am quite clear that she should be taught to have great reverence for and for religion, but that she should feel the feeling of devotion and love to our Heavenly Father encourages earthly children to have for Him, not one of fear and trembling; and the thoughts of death and an after should not be represented in an alarm and forbidding view, and that she should be made to know as yet no difference of creeds, and not think that she can pray on her knees, or that those who do not kneel are less fervent and devoted than their prayers." While the Queen was guided in all things relating to the education of the Royal children the Prince's wishes, Her Majesty time to time places upon record, in writing, her own views upon the subject: these memoranda, the education of the head is well provided for, but the education of the heart is dwelt upon as a primary importance. One of the letters dated 4th of March, 1844, winds up thus:—"The greatest maxim of all is—the children should be brought up simply, and in as domestic a way as possible; that (not interfering with lessons) they should be as much as possible with their parents, and learn to place their greatest confidence in the all things." The question of the royal training is also dwelt upon repeatedly and anxiously. That this is best to a child, day by day, at its mother's knees, was the Queen's conviction. So early as 1844, however, the precept of public duty made it impossible to this part of the education of the Prince Royal wholly within her own hands is already a hard case for me," Majesty says, in a memorandum of November of that year, "that my occupations prevent me being with when she says her prayers."—Life of Prince Consort.

"IT SNOWS."

"It snows! it snows! From out the sky
The feathered flakes how fast they fly!
Like little birds, that don't know why
They're on the chase; from place to place,
While neither can the other trace.
It snows! it snows! A merry play
Is o'er us in the air to day!"

"As dancers in an airy hall
That hasn't room to hold them all,
While some kept up, and others fall,
The atoms shift, then thick and swift,
They drive along to form the drift.
That waving up so dazzling white,
Is rising like a wall of white."

"But now the wind comes whistling loud,
To snatch and waft it as a cloud,
Or giant phantom in a shroud.
It spreads, it curls, it mounts, and whirls;
At length a mighty wind unfurls,
And then, away!—but where, none
knows,
Or ever will. It snows! it snows!"

"To-morrow will the storm be done;
Then out will come the golden sun.
And we will see upon the run,
Before his beams, in sparkling streams,
What now a curtain o'er him seems.
And thus with life it ever goes!
'Tis shade and shine! It snows it snows!"

TRUE HEROISM.

Instances of heroism in the prosecution of medical science, and the discharge of professional duty, are happily by no means uncommon. Surgeons who will brave the dangers and horrors of the battle field in order to tend the sick and wounded, themselves suffering great hardships and privation—who will adventure with exploring expeditions into regions of eternal ice—who will, never shrink from fever dens when pestilence is raging—who will, brave fire-damp for humanity and honor's sake—who will, in fact, even submit to experiments upon themselves for the well-being of others are among the greatest benefactors of the human race. Many such there have been and many such at this hour. The rector of Chesham in Cheshire, has just drawn attention to an act of great self-denial on the part of a medical student, and we are pleased to record it prominently in our columns, for the reason that honor ought to be given where honor is due. A poor factory operative had undergone amputation of the right leg in the Manchester Infirmary. He was in an emaciated condition, the hemorrhage was excessive, the poor man was evidently sinking and the cause was about to be abandoned as perfectly hopeless one, when it was suggested that an infusion of new blood might probably be instrumental in saving his life. There-upon, a student named Irvine volunteered to be bled, and twenty-five ounces of the burdens carried horizontally by the men? vital fluid were taken from him, at serious risk to himself, and infused into the system of the dying patient. The Rev. gentleman hearing in this case, made it his duty to visit the Infirmary, when he found the patient out of danger and slowly progressing towards convalescence. "Need we wonder," exclaims the writer, "that the noble band of English doctors on the battle fields in Turkey should reflect such credit upon our national character as the pioneer of Christianity, when a mere stripling at home does not hesitate to peril his own life for the sake of his fellow men?" The incident, natural and simple as it was, yet serves to recall the magnanimous conduct of the great Sir Philip Sydney, who when dying gloriously on the field of Zutphen, gave to an humble comrade, who was wounded and lying

THE PHYSIQUE OF CANADIANS.

(From Brown's "Emigrant and Sportsman in Canada.")

A comparison between the climate of the United States and of Canada, as exemplified by the physique and appearances of the people, is very strongly in favor of the latter climate. A climate suitable to the forest, as we have seen, is also that one most suitable to the growth of grasses and to the health of cattle. It is also most favourable to man, who appears to benefit by a certain amount of humidity in the atmosphere as much as the forest tree. Thus the natives of the forest regions in North America are robust and ruddy, while those of the prairies and treeless regions are lanky and yellow. The world cannot produce finer specimens of manhood than are to be met with in the backwoods of Canada,
more especially in the lumber districts.
Canadian-born men are, if anything, taller than the Old Country people, and less fleshy: they are hardy, robust, and vigorous, presenting a very striking contrast to their next neighbors.

Although the colonies are better known
and more thought about in the Old Country than they were a short time ago, still there is a certain amount of mist to be cleared away. Untravelled and unthinking Englishmen are apt to suppose that because the two countries lie side by side
on the map of the New World, separated
through many degrees by only an imaginary boundary line, that therefore the citizens of Canada and of the United States must be almost identical in physique, appearance, habits, character, and so on. There cannot be a greater mistake. Canadians are simply Englishmen
who have been taken out of the nursery and transplanted into a new field. As the strongest plants are generally chosen by the gardener for planting out, so in emigration it is generally the men of most strength, spirit, energy, and ambition that leave the Old Country to push their fortunes in the new. Conquering
the wilderness and make homesteads out of it, is an occupation calculated to stimulate, and not to subdue, those qualities of mind and body, such as self-reliance,
energy, patience, on the one hand, and hardiness, strength, and activity on the other, which are supposed to be characteristics of Englishmen. There is as much difference between the United States citizen and the Canadian, as between the Englishman and the Frenchman. By blood the American of to-day

SWIFT JUSTICE IN RUSSIA.

A merchant left St. Petersburg to travel across Europe. In the course of his journey he arrived at Warsaw. Being furnished with a letter of introduction,
he repaired to the house of one of the chief citizens there, and was courteously received. He stayed at Warsaw for a week, and his host showed him everything worth seeing in the town. Indeed the visitor was quite overwhelmed by the unusual amount of kindness, rarely shown to any but a friend of long standing. At length the pleasant visit drew to a close, and after breakfast the guest expressed his wish to see some parts of the town of which he had heard.

But, said he, I have with me a small box of great value that I do not like to risk in such places; if it were my own I would not be so particular; but it was intrusted to me by a friend who requested me to deliver it to a person in another town. It contains diamonds and other valuables. Would you do me the great favor of taking charge of it for this day?

The host, with his usual urbanity,
agreed to this proposal, and the merchant
departed with a light heart on his tour of inspection.

Next morning, after breakfast, he cordially thanked his kind entertainers for their zealous hospitality, and added that,
as he was about to depart, he would now
resume his charge of the box, which had never before quitted his person since he had received it from his owner. The host and hostess started at him in well acted amazement.

What box? asked the host. I remember no box; do you, my dear? turning to his wife.

No, she said, I have no recollection of any box whatever.

What was it like? asked the host. Perhaps you left it in your room.

But on the merchant persisting that it was what the host himself it had been left, on returning to his hostess and trying to make her recollect the circumstances, both, after appealing to each other several times, and fortifying each other in their denial, became cold and distant and began hinting that something must have happened to the merchant to induce him to persist in so strange a delusion. As the host touched his forehead with a significant glance,
the poor man remembered that he was in a strange city, and the ground seemed slipping from under his feet; danger to himself loomed up in the distance, and he hastened from the house in alarm.
Straight to the police he went and stated
his case. The official listened impertur-bably to the whole story and then asked:

You gave up the valuable box to an acquaintance of a week's standing, without any witness or written acknowledgment?

He is famed and feared all over the world for his cleverness and shrewdness, or cutness. But the least observant traveller cannot fail to discover that he has cultivated his brains at the expense of his body. The citizen of the United States has also fought against and conquered the wildness; but he has done this not with his own strong arms, like the Canadian, but with the hands of the Chinaman, the African, and the Irishman.

I suppose in considering the future of the two peoples, an ethnologist would study the woman more than the man. There is quite as great a difference between the American women and the Canadian women as between the men. American women who have not to work for they object to any sort of exercise, except, perhaps dancing. They neither walk nor ride. They go by rail and drive in carriages. They object even to the work of looking after and superintending a house, and on that account prefer to live in hotels. Those who are obliged to work for their living do so as school teachers, as clerks in post offices, in shops, in any way in fact where physical exertion can be dispensed with. The American woman has perfectly regular though rather sharp features, and when very young is undoubtedly very pretty; the bloom, however rapidly fades away, and she is an old woman at thirty. She has only one, or at most two children. The Canadian woman is a marked contrast. She is, in appearance, quite the Englishwoman—generally a blonde. Canadian ladies are fully as much addicted to outdoor pursuits and amusements as are English ladies. Even in the depths of winter they have their daily walks on their snow shooing, tobogganing, or skating parties. Thanks to this more healthy mode of life, to their robust constitutions, and to their healthy climate they preserve their good looks to the last. As to the poorer woman in Canada they have no Chinamen, negroes, or Irishmen to work for them and so they are compelled to attend to their own households and dairies, and this seems to agree well with them. Unlike the Americans, there seems to be no limit to their families and no end to their good looks, and the middleaged Canadian woman (if such an expression can be applied to the fair sex) present as great a contrast to the worn-out and faded American women of a similar unmentionable age, as can possibly be imagined.

ually thanked his kind entertainers for their zealous hospitality, and added that, as he was about to depart, he would now resume his charge of the box, which had never before quitted his person since he had received it from his owner. The host and hostess started at him in well acted amazement.

What box? asked the host. I remember no box; do you, my dear? turning to his wife.

No, she said, I have no recollection of any box whatever.

What was it like? asked the host. Perhaps you left it in your room.

But on the merchant persisting that it was what the host himself it had been left, on returning to his hostess and trying to make her recollect the circumstances, both, after appealing to each other several times, and fortifying each other in their denial, became cold and distant and began hinting that something must have happened to the merchant to induce him to persist in so strange a delusion. As the host touched his forehead with a significant glance, the poor man remembered that he was in a strange city, and the ground seemed slipping from under his feet; danger to himself loomed up in the distance, and he hastened from the house in alarm. Straight to the police he went and stated his case. The official listened imperturbably to the whole story and then asked:

You gave up the valuable box to an acquaintance of a week's standing, without any witness or written acknowledgment?

He had been so very kind, and in his position—

Bah!—you a man of business! But have you no proof that the box belongs to you,

None whatever except the key. It is locked, and I have the key—here it is; and he produced a small key from an inner pocket.

The official remained in thought for some time, and then said:

Well, I will do the only thing I can for you. Archduke Constantine, the Governor of Poland, is a stern, harsh man, but he is known for his vigorous justice, and if he believes your story, he will do his best for you, I will take you to him at once.

No time was lost, and the merchant soon found himself in the archduke's presence, and was desired to relate his story. When it was concluded, the archduke, after a moment's reflection, rang a bell. An official entered.

Sent for M——, naming the treacherous host.

It was quickly done, and the archduke, without question or preamble, said to the guilty man:

Sit down at the writing table, and write as I shall dictate to you.

The man took a seat, and took up a pen; the archduke began dictating—

My dear wife: All is found out—

No; I won't write that, said the man springing from his seat.

Then you are guilty was the prompt answer.

Puzzled and foiled he resumed his seat and wrote as he was desired.

My dear wife: All is found out. Send the box by the bearer.

Then he signed it with his own name, by the archduke's order, and a messenger was dispatched with it. The messenger found the lady at her toilet; when she read the missive she turned ashy pale, trembling violently. Then, leaning forward, she drew the box from the recess in the toilet table, and handed it to the bearer, who, swiftly turning, placed in the hands of the archduke. He immediately handed it to the merchant, desiring him to unlock it; and that being done, he asked whether the diamonds were all there. Yes, the box had not been opened; they were exactly as the merchant had left them.

Again the archduke rang the bell, and to the attendant who entered he said, designating the guilty man:

Take him to Siberia; he is not to go to his own house again.

human race. Many such there have been and many such at this hour. The rector of Chislede in Cheshire, has just drawn attention to an act of great self-denial on the part of a medical student, and we are pleased to record it prominently in our columns, for the reason that honor ought to be given where honor is due. A poor factory operative had undergone amputation of the right leg in the Manchester Infirmary. He was in an emaciated condition, the hemorrhage was excessive, the poor man was evidently sinking, and the cause was about to be abandoned as perfectly hopeless one, when it was suggested that an infusion of new blood might probably be instrumental in saving his life. Thereupon, a student named Irvine volunteered to be bled, and twenty-five ounces of the burdens carried horizontally by the men? vital fluids were taken from him, at serious risk to himself, and infused into the system of the dying patient. The Rev. gentleman hearing in this case, made it his duty to visit the Infirmary, when he found the patient out of danger and slowly progressing towards convalescence. "Need we wonder," exclaims the writer, "that the noble band of English doctors on the battle fields in Turkey should reflect such credit upon our national character as the pioneer of Christianity, when a mere strapping at home does not hesitate to peril his own life for the sake of his fellow men?" The incident, natural and simple as it was, yet serves to recall the magnanimous conduct of the great Sir Philip Sydney, who when dying gloriously on the field of Zeuthen, gave to an humble comrade, who was wounded and lying near him, the draught of water he himself needed to slake his own burning thirst.

BEAUX OF FORMER TIMES.

Sir Walter Raleigh wore a white satin pinked vest, close-sleeved to the wrist; over the body a brown doublet, finely flowered and embroidered with pearls. In the feather of his hat a large ruby, and a pearl drop at the bottom of the sprig in place of a button; his trunk of breeches, with his stockings and ribbon garters, fringed at the end, all white, and buff shoes with white ribbon. On great court days his shoes were so gorgeously covered with precious stones as to have exceeded the value of £6,500, and he had of suit of armor of solid silver, with a sword and belt blazing with diamonds, rubies and pearls.

King James' favorite, the Duke of Buckingham, could afford to have his diamonds tacked so loosely on that when he chose to shake off a few on the ground he obtained all the fame he desired from the picker-up, for the duke never condescended to accept what he himself had dropped. His clothes were trimmed with great diamond buttons, and he wore diamond hat-bands, cockades and ear-rings, yoked with great robes and knots of pearls. He had twenty-seven suits of clothes made, the richest that embroidery, lace, silk, velvet, gold and gems could contribute, one of which was a white uncut velvet, set all over, both suit and cloak, with diamonds valued at four score thousand pounds, besides a great feather stuck all over with diamonds as were also his sword, girdle, hat and spurs. When the difference in the value of money is considered the sums thus ridiculously squandered in dress must have been prodigious.

THE LOCOMOTIVE VS. SUPERSTITION

When the Nicholas railway was constructed, in 1848, from St. Petersburg to Moscow, the work was done under contracts with American engineers and the cars and engines were supplied from Baltimore by the famous establishment of the Winans Brothers. The Russian priests oppose every modern innovation and, of course, they were "down" on the railway. When the road was opened they determined to stop it, and so they went in force to a point on the road and set up a holy picture to stop the new work of the devil. The train came slowly along and the engineer, seeing the picture standing number, the shrieks of brave men, rose the turmoil of nature. Then the crew reeled on, staggering like a drunken man, and the unfortunate craft blotted out. George had caught up, and held her close until the first had subsided, and he felt the eddy gliding on unobstructed, when he added her, and rushed out into the sea and took command of the steamer.

For two hours they rushed on, the storm subsided, when the mate to him, and whispered, in a horrible voice, "We have sprung a leak!"

"In a single instant the two men looked each other in horrified surprise, and George sprang for his trumpet. "To pumps!" he cried. "Work with a men."

They worked as only men can who are in for their lives. But, fast as they dived, the water poured in faster than pumps could draw it out. It gained, inch by inch, and George hurried about, ringing the boats for the salvation of the passengers. The storm had subsided idly as it rose, but though they looked idly upon the waves, they felt that they were doomed.

"Get out the boats!" cried the sailors. "Pumps can't save us. The steamer goes down."

George made a rush for the boat on the starboard quarter, but George Manly, before it, a revolver in his hand, warned them sternly back: "I am in of this boat yet, and my passengers shall be saved first, my crew next, myself last of all. But the man who is a finger upon any of these boats, except order it, is a dead man."

George quailed before the determined man, and when he called for certain to help lower away the boat, they obeyed him. One by one the frightened passengers descended, until there was room left for the four rowers and the mate who was to command the boat.

"I will go with you," said George. "You've passed, Watkins?"

"Yes, ay, Sir. God bless you, captain, the boat was pushed off, and the ring one was lowered. It was larger than the one which had just left the pier, but not large enough to hold all of us, with his own hand, place Myra in the boat, and put the child in her."

No one remained upon the steamer except Myra's husband and Manly. The sailors began to grumble. "Come along, cap. She is getting y. But both of you can't come in the boat; she won't stand it."

"I know it," said George, calmly. "I am not going with you. Gale Merrick went out that boat. The steamer will not float in fifteen minutes."

"I will not go," said Gale. "You must," replied George, almost calmly. "And before you go I want to take this letter. When you know I am dead, give it to your wife. If I return it to me."

George thrust the sealed letter into the hand of the husband, and seizing him gently, forced him into the boat, and off the painter. The boat and steamer lurched in the darkness, and George remained upon the ill-fated craft, in the consciousness that he had heard her voice praying them to return and save him. He was glad they did attempt it. The boat was loaded heavily already, and his weight would do much. Climbing to the quarter, he sat calmly down and awaited fate. The last they saw of him, under the glare of the steamer's lamps, was his body stretched out in a mute gesture of well. Living, no man ever saw him again, and it was two days after when they found his body upon the sea. When he was buried, Myra's band brought the package which this man forced into his hand upon that fatal night, and opened it. He had written hastily in pencil,

Myra—Farewell until the coming of a brighter day.

THE QUEEN ON THE EDUCATION OF HER DAUGHTER.

"I am quite clear that she should be taught to have great reverence for God and for religion, but that she should have the feeling of devotion and love which our Heavenly Father encourages. His earthly children to have for Him, and not one of fear and trembling; and that the thoughts of death and an after life should not be represented in an alarming and forbidding view, and that she should be made to know as yet no difference of creeds, and not think that she can only pray on her knees, or that those who do not kneel are less fervent and devout in their prayers."

While wishing to be guided in all things relating to the education of the Royal children by the Prince's wishes, Her Majesty from time to time places upon record, in writing, her own views upon the subject. In these memoranda, the education of the head is well provided for, but the education of the heart is dwelt upon as of primary importance. One of them, dated 4th of March, 1844, winds up thus:—

"The greatest maxim of all is—that the children should be brought up as simply, and in as domestic a way as possible; that (not interfering with their lessons) they should be as much as possible with their parents, and learn to place their greatest confidence in them in all things." The question of the religious training is also dwelt upon repeatedly and anxiously. That this is best given to a child, day by day, at its mother's knees, was the Queen's conviction. Even so early as 1844, however, the pressure of public duty made it impossible to keep this part of the education of the Princess Royal wholly within her own hands. "It is already a hard case for me," Her Majesty says, in a memorandum of 18th of November of that year, "that my occupations prevent me being with her when she says her prayers."—Life of the Prince Consort.

RUNNING IN DEBT.

I will dwell on this point, for I would deter others from entering this place of torment. Half the young men in this country, with many old enough to know better, would go into business—that is, into debt—to-morrow, if they could. Most poor men are so ignorant as to envy the merchant or manufacturer, whose life is an incessant struggle with pecuniary difficulties, who is driven to constant "shining," and who from month to month barely evades the insolvency which sooner or later overtakes most men in business; so that it has been computed that but one man in twenty of them achieve a pecuniary success. For my own part, I would rather be a convict in State prison, a slave in a rice swamp, than to pass through life under the harrow of debt. Hunger, cold, rags, hard work, contempt, suspicion, unjust reproach, are disagreeable, but debt is infinitely worse than all. And if it had pleased God to spare either of all my sons to be the support of my declining years, the lesser which I should most earnestly seek to impress upon them is, "Never run in debt." Avoid pecuniary obligations as you would a pestilence and famine. If you have but fifty cents and can get no more for a week, buy a peck of corn, parch it, and live on it, rather than owe a dollar! Of course I know that some men must do a business that involves risk, and must give notes or other obligations, and I do not consider him in debt who can pay his hands directly on the means of paying, at some little sacrifice, all he owes; I speak of real debt—that which involves risk or sacrifice on one side, obligations and dependence on the other—and I say from all such, let every youth humbly pray God to preserve him evermore.—Horace Greeley.

The assembled multitude raised a shout and the priests called out that the saint was all-powerful and would prevail against wickedness. The officer in charge of the train came out and took a survey of the situation. Then he told the engineer to run back a quarter of a mile and bring the train to halt. The shouting was redoubled and the priests were in the most rapturous delight. But their exultation was soon changed to grief as the master of ceremonies told the engineer, "Put on all steam and go ahead without regard to consequences." The engine went ahead and down fell the holy picture, torn and crushed by the wheels of an American locomotive. Modern civilization was triumphant and the priests and their followers no longer shouted in triumph.

POSITION OF CONSTANTINOPLE.

Compare the city to-day, considered as the capital of a great empire, with Rome, or with any European capital. There is not one of them all that can sustain the comparison for a moment. Constantinople sits like a queen on the one great highway between Europe and Asia. Her site is easy of defence. She has a magnificent harbor. She is facile mistress of the sea on either side, by means of the straits of the Bosphorus and the Hellespont. What is the site of London, or Paris, or Berlin, or Vienna, or St. Petersburg in the comparison? No wonder the Czar has long looked with envious eyes toward the Golden Horn—to the capital city of the Greek church and the Greek empire. No wonder that the whole "Eastern question" has long hinged on what is to be done with Constantinople and the highway which she controls. Europe cares little about the outlying possessions of the Sultan; but it is a vital question with every chief European state who should hold the key city of all the East.

PARTY SUPPORT.

We regret to learn that the enterprising Publishers, of the Hamilton Spectator have failed, and their publishing establishment has now passed into the hands of the creditors, who are likely to be large losers. The Spectator has, for years, been considered the leading organ of the Conservative party west of Toronto, and has very faithfully served its party. For a long time it was considered a first class investment and gave its publishers good dividends, but of late, it has become well known that the leading Tory papers have been very poor financial investments. Since the much vaunted "reaction" has set in the Spectator has gone under, and the "organ-in-chief" of all the organs, the Mail, it is no secret has not been a self sustaining office, though backed with all the prestige and pomp of the gentleman's party. From statements made in the House last year by the late Hon. J. H. Cameron, it would seem that about all of the original capital stock of the Mail has been absorbed and heavy draws are now constantly required of its friends in order to relieve its financial embarrassments. The Ottawa Times became a faithful Conservative a few months ago, and has since suspended publication entirely. Several other journals of the same party are said to be no source of revenue to the publishers, but we refrain from giving the names, for business reasons.

On the other hand leading Reform papers are being well sustained financially. The Globe, it is well understood, is probably the best paying newspaper ever established in Canada. The London Advertiser is succeeding remarkably well, and wonderfully increasing its circulation. The Hamilton Times is thriving splendidly in the same city where the Spectator has languished. The British Whig, is probably better sustained than any other paper ever published in Kingston, while in different, other cities, and towns, the Reform journals are being enlarged, and are giving good indication of prosperity and encouragement.

We can only account for this difference from the fact that the principles advocated by the Reform journals are such as command themselves to the patronage and good judgement of the people. On the other hand, most of the faithful Tory journals, during the past four or five years, have been called up to wade through an amount of dirty work, in the way of abuse and misrepresentation, that has been disgusting, in the long run, to even their best friends. To be required, year after year, to defend the abominable Pacific Scandals, and other things equally as reprehensible, has been too much for a long bearing reading public. The party went down under the weight of these crushing exposures, and now the organs seem dying out in their foolish effort to endorse what the whole country repudiates.

THE TURKISH WAR.

For weeks past the news from day to day from Turkey has been most conflicting. One day the information has been that the terms of peace had been about settled between Turkey and the Allied Powers, and the next day that things looked warlike. It now seems that after some weeks of hard work at treaty making the attempt to arrange satisfactory terms of peace is a failure. The authorities at Constantinople refuse to accept the terms required at their hands by the representatives of England, Russia and Prussia. The Sultan and his immediate advisers, it would seem, would have been willing to accept the terms, but the great body of the Turks are in such decided and briefly alluding to the position of our County affairs, and the work to be transacted. He then nominated Mr. R. Fraser, of Ernestown as an auditor, which was confirmed by the council. On the appointment of the second auditor, there was the usual amount of canvassing. Each member had his friend whom he would like to see honored, and accordingly there were about a score of nominations, resulting finally in the election of Robert Collins, Esq., of Adolphustown.

LENNOX AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the annual meeting in the council room Napanee, on 17th inst., the Secretary-Treasurer read his report as follows:—
 Balance on hand from last year, $162.70.
 Government Grant, 700.00.
 Member's Subscriptions, 247.00.
 D. Fraser, Esq., Special Prizes, 7.00.
 Total Receipts, $1066.70.
 Paid for prizes; to Township Societies; and Expenses, $1011.18.

Balance on hand, $45.52.
 Moved by Mr. Jas. P. Lake, seconded by Mr. Jas. Allen, that this society petition the Local Legislature to divide the province into Districts for agricultural purpose, and that for three successive years the annual grant, now given to the Provincial Society, be divided amongst them, and that every fourth year the whole of the grant be appropriated for a general exhibition for the whole province to be held at Toronto.—Carried.

It was understood, and upon that understanding the motion was carried, that the division of the province into four districts should make London, Hamilton, Kingston, and Ottawa the respective headquarters of the several divisions.

The election of officers was then proceeded with, and resulted as follows:—President, Wm. Caton, Esq., Richmond; 1st Vice do, J. P. Lake, Esq., N. Fredericksburgh; 2nd Vice do, John Herring, Esq., Napanee; Secretary-Treasurer, C. James, Napanee.

Moved by Mr. C. W. Huffman, seconded by Mr. Doller, that Amherst Island be allowed one director for the current year. Carried.

The election of officers for Amherst Island and North Fredericksburgh was as follows:—

DIRECTORS.—Jas. Allen and William Miller, Napanee; Nathan Caton, Richmond; J. B. Allison and C. Huffman, South Fredericksburgh; W. N. Dollar, North Fredericksburgh; B. Brisco, Jr., and Lewis Stover, Ernestown; George Wright, Amherst Island.

OUR PROVINCIAL FINANCES.

The financial statement, made in the House by the Hon. Provincial Treasurer last week, is the best possible answer that can be given to the fault findings, and the evil prediction of the Opposition during the past two or three years. The public have become accustomed to the cry that the Government is an extravagant and expensive one, squandering the surplus so carefully laid up by their predecessors. It has been more than once foretold that in a short time the expenditure would go beyond the current receipts, and that direct taxation must soon stare us in the face. When the official statement is made however the fact is clearly established that our Provincial finances are in a most healthy condition, notwithstanding the hard times, and the increasing demand on the Treasury, the Province of Ontario is now reported out of debt and a Surplus in the Treasury of not less than $1,873,000 four millions eight hundred and seventy three thousands dollars. The actual surplus of receipts over expenditure during the past year has been $353,152, which is certainly a fine margin in the right direction. The total receipts of the Province for the year 1876 was $2,579,980, and the total expenditure $2,237,145.

Outside of the ordinary current expenditure a large amount of our surplus, from year to year has been expended in aiding the various railways that have been constructed where they were calculated to people. On the other hand, most of the faithful Tory journals, during the past four or five years, have been called up to wade through an amount of dirty work, in the way of abuse and misrepresentation, that has been disgusting, in the long run, to even their best friends. To be required, year after year, to defend the abominable Pacific Scandals, and other things equally as reprehensible, has been too much for a long bearing reading public. The party went down under the weight of these crushing exposures, and now the organs seem dying out in their foolish effort to endorse what the whole country repudiates.

THE TURKISH WAR.

For weeks past the news from day to day from Turkey has been most conflicting. One day the information has been that the terms of peace had been about settled between Turkey and the Allied Powers, and the next day that things looked warlike. It now seems that after some weeks of hard work at treaty making the attempt to arrange satisfactory terms of peace is a failure. The authorities at Constantinople refuse to accept the terms required at their hands by the representatives of England, Russia and Prussia. The Sultan and his immediate advisers, it would seem, would have been willing to accept the terms, but the great body of the Turks are in such decided opposition, that should the rulers ratify a treaty on the terms required, their lives would not be worth a week's purchase. In Turkey when a member of the Government becomes unpopular or distasteful assassination is generally the means resorted to for his removal, and in consequence the men at the helm of affairs are pretty sensitive to public opinion.

Seeing that all proposals towards peace have failed, the English and other Ambassadors are reported to have taken their leave of Constantinople on Monday last, and any further attempts abandoned. It now seems inevitable that the fighting between Turkey and the Provinces in rebellion will be resumed, and Russia will be left free, either to assist openly, the Provinces, or declare a war on its own account.

It has been well understood for a long time that Russia "wants a slice of Turkey," and has longed for an opportunity. That opportunity now seems to be upon her, but it is strongly suspected that Russia does not find itself in immediate readiness. The Government is not in such efficient hands as in days of Czar Nicholas. The army is not in an efficient state, and the treasury is empty. Under the circumstances it is doubtful if Russia can or will do much, and the present crisis will but tend to show her weakness. If prepared for nothing more, however, she may be able to give such assistance of men and means to the people in revolt, as to enable them to break their present yoke. Turkey is such a barbarous and despotic

From Ernestown there is an entirely new set of representatives, Mr. Spafford, the Reeve of the last two years, was defeated by Mr. Aylsworth, a new member, Mr. Hogle retired and Mr. Huffman was unsuccessful at the polls. Their places are supplied by J. M. Parrott, Esq., a former member of much municipal experience, and Nial P. Wood, Esq., a rising young man. Napanee supplies Mr. Herring, as Reeve in the place of Mr. Huffman, and is again represented by Charles Miller Esq., as Deputy. At one o'clock he was called home, and arrived but an hour before unconsciousness set in. Death ensued in the evening, carrying along with it unspoken farewells and the joys of the happiest home in Kingston.

The suddenness of the blow is crushing upon a bereaved husband and five tender orphaned children, who will never cease to feel the loss of a noble wife and mother. The King of Terrors could not have chosen a heavier blow. Mr. and Mrs. Kirkpatrick besides being credited with the fullest martial happiness, were by their endearing qualities united, the centre of the social circles of Kingston, a position which Mrs. Kirkpatrick adorned by her superiority as an affability. Their home was surrounded by all the elements of earthly happiness—wealth, position and friends innumerable. The invasion of such a home and the death of one of its members, would under the most alleviating circumstances be a deep sorrow, but when the attack is so sudden and distressing as this has been, no description can picture the sadness it has left in its train. The removal of this cultured and popular lady will be felt in one-half of the homes of the city, and in all of them to-day a deep regret is expressed. The sympathies extended to Mr. Kirkpatrick are many and sincere from all classes.

The deceased was a daughter of the late Hon. John Macaulay. She had not yet passed the prime of life, and many years of usefulness and happiness were looked forward to on her behalf.—Whig.

The 300-mile match for £100 a side, between the Chicago pedestrian, O'Leary and William Howes, of London, has resulted in a victory for the Englishman. The match, which took place at the Victoria Skating Rink, Chalmbridge Heath, was commenced at 5 p.m. Tuesday, 26th ult., and lasted till 10 p.m. Friday, 29th ult., when the American retired, having accomplished 269 miles 5 laps, to Howes' 241 miles 5 laps. The time occupied was 77 hours. Howes, who pulled up fresh expressed a wish to walk on the following day 50 miles in 10 hours, his challenge was not responded to. It is but fair to O'Leary to mention that while his opponent was in good condition, he at the commencement of the match was suffering from a severe attack of diarrhoea.

COWARDLY ASSAULTS.—When a candidate for high office is so well liked as so popular with the masses as to make his defeat difficult in a fair and honest fight, mean and cowardly men are wanting who delight in manufacturing lies and slandering his good name. There are also those whose selfishness prompts them to prostitute their honor, pervert truth, and ignore right, for the sake of injuring competitor in business sagacity they have not the talent to successfully compete in an honorable way. The thoughts are suggested by the mean cowardly attacks made upon me and my medicine, by those who imagine the pecuniary prospects injured by the great popularity which my standard medicine have acquired, and the continued growth of my profession practice, narrow-minded practitioners which do not possess sufficient merit to successfully compete for popular favor have resorted to such cowardly strategy as to publish all sorts of ridiculous reports about the composition of my medicines. Almanacs, "Receipt Books," and other pamphlets, are issued and scattered broadcast over the land wherein these contemptible knaves publish pretended analyses of my medicine and receipts for making them. Some of these publications are given high-sounding names, pretend to be issued by respectable men of education and position, for the good of the real object in their circulation, which is to injure the sale of my medicine. "The Popular Health Almanac" is the high-sounding name of one of the publications, which contains bogus receipts without a grain of truth in them. Not less devoid of truth are those which have been published by one Dr. L. Detroit, in the Nichigan Farmer, and all other manufactures of medicines, several so-called journals of Pharmacology. They are all prompted by jealousy at utterly fail in accomplishing the object of their authors, for, notwithstanding their free circulation, my medicines continue to sell more largely than other manufactured in this country and are constantly increasing in sale despite the base lies concocted and circulated by such knaves. The people find that these medicines possess genuine merit, accomplish what their manufacturer claims for them and are not the vile poisonous nostrum which jealous, narrow-minded physicians and sneaking compounders of competitive medicines represented them to be. Among the large number of pretended analyses published, it is significant fact that no two have been at all alike—constantly proving the dishonesty of the authors. It is enough for people to know that while thousands, yes, I may truly say millions, have taken my medicine and have been cured, no one has ever received injury from its use.

It has been more than once foretold that in a short time the expenditure would go beyond the current receipts, and that direct taxation must soon stare us in the face. When the official statement is made however the fact is clearly established that our Provincial finances are in a most healthy condition, notwithstanding the hard times, and the increasing demand on the Treasury, the Province of Ontario is now reported out of debt and a Surplus in the Treasury of not less than $4,873,000 four millions eight hundred and seventy three thousands dollars. The actual surplus of receipts over expenditure during the past year has been $353,152, which is certainly a fine margin in the right direction. The total receipts of the Province for the year 1876 was $2,579,980, and the total expenditure $2,237,145.

Outside of the ordinary current expenditure a large amount of our surplus, from year to year has been expended in aiding the various railways that have been constructed where they were calculated to assist in developing the resources of the Province, or to open up new sections of country. During the past ten years about three million dollars has thus been given in public aid. The total number of roads that have received aid is 22. Of these 11 have been completed, and have received the full amount of Government grant promised; 6 are now in course of construction, and the balance are but partly completed, but no work is at present being done on them. It is stated by the Hon Treasurer that over ten times the amount of government aid (over thirty three millions) has been expended from other sources in connection with these roads. The advantage of the aid thus given seems at once apparent, as these large sums have been expended directly among our people, and for every dollar of public aid given, there have been ten dollars expended from other sources. The only new road of any importance, just now pressing for aid is the Ontario and Quebec road, a direct line between Ottawa and Toronto, much shortening the distance between our Provincial and Dominion capital, and opening up to general railway traffic a large section of our rear counties. The importance of this road seems now pretty freely admitted. Since the recent Grand Trunk strike, it is more than ever apparent that the whole trade and travel from one end of this Dominion to the other, should not depend entirely on one line of road. We do not know yet what may be the decision of the government and Parliament in regard to the new application for aid, but it would seem as though it would be money, well expended in furthering the interests of the Province.

bassadors are reported to have taken their leave of Constantinople on Monday last, and any farther attempts abandoned. Napanee supplies Mr. Herring, as Reeve in the place of Mr. Huffman, and is again represented by Charles Miller Esq., as Deputy. Richmond again sends Mr. Storr as Reeve, and Mr. Dafos comes as Deputy in place of Mr. Wilson, he is a new man. The townships of Addington have not made many changes. Camden again is represented by Messrs Paul, Bell and Madden, all experienced men. Newburgh again sends Mr. Bell, a gentleman of weight. Sheffield is again represented by Mr. Joyner as Reeve, and Mr. Coulter takes the place of R. McDonald as Deputy. Mr. Hornic comes from Kaladar in place of Mr. Miller, while from the extreme north, Denbigh, comes our old friend Mr. Lane whose genial face is so familiar in the council of which he has been some years a member. The present members are all practical hard working men, in full sympathy with their constituents, and with one or two exceptions, are not given to much talking. We expect to see the business of the year transacted in a practical business like, economical way.

In the election of Warden there was not the usual amount of canvassing. It seemed freely admitted that the choice lay between Mr. Storr of Richmond, and Mr. Dollar of North Fredericksburgh, they are both old and well tried members and we have no hesitation in saying that in the selection of either, the choice would have been in good hands. Though Mr. Storr was unsuccessful this year we hope yet to see him in the Warden's Chair.

The first ballot for the Warden resulted in Storr, 8; Dollar, 8; Parrott, 3; Joyner, 1. The second ballot gave Mr. Dollar, 13, and Storr 7. The usual declaration of office was then prepared and Dollar was sworn in by Judge Wilkinson. He was escorted to the chair by Messrs Storr and Ham.

The Warden made a brief speech, thanking the council for the honor conferred,

DEATH OF MRS. G. A. KIRKPATRICK.

On Saturday evening the wife of Mr. G. A. Kirkpatrick, M. P. for Frontenac, died very suddenly. Her illness was of but three days' duration, and its dangerous aspect did not appear till a few hours before she was carried off. Wednesday she felt indisposed, not sufficiently, however, to interfere with an entertainment at her residence upon that evening. The attack developed itself as one of bronchitis, and troubled her severely on Thursday and Friday. On Saturday morning her physician had not anticipated any immediate danger, and Mr. Kirkpatrick proceeded to his office. At one o'clock he was called home, and arrived but an hour before unconsciousness set in. Death ensued in the evening, carrying along with it unspoken farewells and the joys of the happiest home in Kingston.
 The suddenness of the blow is crushing upon a bereaved husband and five tender orphaned children, who will never cease to feel the loss of a noble wife and mother. The King of Terrors could not have chosen a more blow. Mr. and Mrs. Kirkpatrick besides being credited with the fullest marital happiness, were by their endearing qualities united, the centre of the social circles of Kingston, a position which Mrs. Kirkpatrick adorned by her superior grace and affability. Their home was surrounded by all the elements of earthly happiness—wealth, position and friends innumerable. The invasion of such a home and the death of one of its members, would under the most alleviating of circumstances be a deep sorrow, but when the attack is so sudden and distressing as this has been, no description can picture the sadness it has left in its train. The removal of this cultured and popular lady will be felt in one-half of the homes of the city, and in all of them to-day a deep regret is expressed. The sympathies extended to Mr. Kirkpatrick are many and sincere from all classes.
 The deceased was a daughter of the late Hon. John Macaulay. She had not yet passed the prime of life, and many years of usefulness and happiness were looked for and to her behalf.—Whig.

HOWES AND O'LEARY.

The 300-mile match for £100 a side, between the Chicago pedestrian, O'Leary and William Howes, of London, has resulted in a victory for the Englishman. The match, which took place at the Victoria Skating Rink, Chambridge Heath, was commenced at 5 p. m. Tuesday, 26th ult., and lasted till 10 p. m. Friday, 29th ult., when the American retired, having accomplished 269 miles 5 laps, to Howes' 241 miles 5 laps. The time occupied was 77 hours. Howes, who pulled up fresh expressed a wish to walk on the following day 50 miles in 10 hours, his challenge was not responded to. It is but fair to O'Leary to mention that while his opponent was in good condition, he at the commencement of the match was suffering from a severe attack of diarrhoea.

PIERCE'S PURGATIVE PELLET.

Have you humor or bile?
 Hanging round all the while.
 To bother and sicken?
 Pierce's Purgative Pellet
 Will surely expel it.
 Does miasma invade,
 And by stealth make a wad.
 Like an owl on a chicken?
 Pierce's Purgative Pellet
 Is the right thing to quell it.
 For an indolent liver,
 That seldom or never,
 Its true function performs,
 Pierce's Purgative Pellet
 Has naught to excel it.
 Does dyspepsia's deep gloom
 On your horizon loom?
 Boiling darkness and worms?
 Dr. Pierce's good Pellet,
 If you take it, will tell it.
 To "get out" and be seen,
 With its impus vile and mean.
 In your system no more;
 Then buy the nice Pellet
 The druggists all sell it.

COWARDLY ASSAULTS.—When a candidate for high office is so well liked and so popular with the masses as to make his defeat difficult in a fair and honorable light, mean and cowardly men are not wanting who delight in manufacturing lies and slandering his good name. There are also those whose selfishness prompt them to prostitute their honor, pervert truth, and ignore right, for the sake of injuring competitor in business sagacity they have not the talent to successfully compete in an honorable way. These thoughts are suggested by the mean, cowardly attacks made upon me and my medicine, by those who imagine their pecuniary prospects injured by the great popularity which my standard medicines have acquired, and the continued growth of my profession practice. Narrow-minded practitioners which do not possess sufficient merit to successfully compete for popular favor have resorted to such cowardly strategy as to publish all shots of ridiculous reports about the composition of my medicines. Almanacs, "Receipt Books," and other pamphlets, are issued and scattered broadcast over the land, wherein these contemptible knaves publish pretended analyses of my medicine and receipts for making them. Some of these publications are given high soundnames, pretend to be issued by respectable men of education and position, for the good of the real object in their circulation, which is to injure the sale of my medicine. "The Popular Health Almanac" is the high-sounding name of one of these publications, which contains bogus receipts without a grain of truth in them. Not less devoid of truth are those which have been published by one Dr. L. of Detroit, in the Michigan Farmer, and by other manufactures of medicines, in several so-called journals of Pharmacy. They are all prompted by jealousy and utterly fail in accomplishing the objects of their authors, for, notwithstanding their free circulation, my medicines continue to sell more largely than others manufactured in this country and are constantly increasing in sale despite the base lies concocted and circulated by such knaves. The people find that these medicines possess genuine merit, accomplish what their manufacturer claims for them and are not the vile poisonous nostrums which jealous, narrow-minded physicians and sneaking compounders of competing medicines represented them to be. Among the large number of pretended analyses published, it is a significant fact that no two have been at all alike—conclusively proving the dishonesty of their authors. It is enough for people to know that while thousands, yes, I may truthfully say millions, have taken my medicine and have been cured, no one has

For the information of Christians generally, it may be briefly stated that this Institution, now in full operation, owes its origin to the liberality of a Christian gentleman, a resident of Toronto, who has invested a portion of his means in the enterprise, as a free-will offering to the Lord, with the view of scattering broadcast over our land, Tracts, Books, &c., which unfold the exalted privileges of the believers, and treat of the "LIFE OF FAITH" or Trust, and of the power and peace of HOLINESS, and Gospel and Evangelical Literature.

Special notice is called to the fact that this is

No Denominational Institution.

It is neither connected with, nor under the patronage of any particular church. All the Publications it issues will be strictly evangelical, and will meet the wants of all Christians. Largely the Books, &c., &c., will be those published by the Willard Tract Depository of Boston, under the care of the well known Dr. CULLIS.

ALL PROFITS that may be made will be devoted to the establishment of a fund for gratuitous distribution of the Tracts and Books, to persons and places where they are needed, as may be directed by the Committee. Notices of the Press. The Magazine has attained its one quarter century and more of existence to that point where it may be said of it, in the words of Dr. Johnson, "It is vain to blame and useless to praise." The lustre of its long-ago-attained reputation has increased as the years have passed, and its future seems as bright if not brighter than at any time since the golden hue of prosperity settled around its later and best years.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Harper's Monthly is marked by the same characteristics which gave it circulation from the first with the better class of readers. It combines reading matter with illustrations in a way to make clear and vivid the facts presented. Pictures merely designed to catch the eye of the ignorant are never inserted.—Chicago Journal.

For the information of Christians generally,
it may be briefly stated that this Institution,
now in full operation, owes its origin to the liberality of a Christian gentleman, a resident of Toronto, who has invested a portion of his means in the enterprise, as a free-will offering to the Lord, with the view of scattering broadcast over our land, Tracts, Books, &c., &c., which unfold
the exalted privileges of the believers, and treat of the "LIFE or FAITH" or Trust, and of the power and peace of HOLINESS, and Gospel and Evangelical Literature.

Special notice is called to the fact that this is
No Denominational Institution.

It is neither connected with, nor under the patronage of any particular church. All the Publications it issues will be strictly evangelical,
and will meet the wants of all Christians. Largely the Books, &c., &c., will be those published by the Willard Tract Repository of Boston, under the care of the well known Dr. CULLIS.

ALL PROFITS that may be made will be devoted to the establishment of a fund for gratuitous distribution of the Tracts and Books, to persons and places where they are needed, as may be directed by the Committee. We beg also to say that this Fund for free distribution is open for donations to all who may desire to help in this work of God.

We ask all who may desire to promote the higher spiritual life of the churches and to help
in winning souls for Christ, to co-operate with us by circulating sound religious literature
throughout the land.

References for further information may be

NAPANEE, JAN. 26th, 1877.

Chess.

We understand a chess club has been formed by some of our Napanee players.

Tea Meeting.

The C. M. Church at Mount Pleasant, is to have a tea meeting on Tuesday evening next.

Father Chiquy

Is to lecture in Selby on Monday next, subject: "Why I became a protestant." Admission 25 cts.

soothing Syrup.

Some female dental patients in an adjoining city carry a private whiskey bottle wherewith to quiet their excited nerves, previous to a molar extraction.

Wanted.

A lively exchange advertises for a fighting editor. Our editor don't fight, but we'll send our devil, he can lick his weight in wild-cats.

He is Coming.

A monster tramp over seven feet tall passed through Toronto to-day, en route for Napanee. Jerry—have that door enlarged, and lay in a fresh supply of salt codfish.

Taken In.

The Oswego Palladium says:—a swindler, giving his name as A. C. March, and claiming to hail from Auburn has taken in several Canadians near Kingston, with a patent horse shoe.

Poor old Kingston.

The Limestone city is lamenting sadly over having to pay $11,000 for school purposes, while the little town of Napanee pays about half that amount, and doesn't grumble at it either.

Wide Awake.

Received the February number of this deservedly popular young people's magazine. The selections of reading matter and very appropriate illustrations are decidedly ahead of anything of the kind published. Price $2 per year, published in Boston.

The Whig Says:—

At every fire women may be seen pushing their way to the front, and, generally, if there is a place where they will be in the way that's where they will be found the thickest. Women should keep in the rear; they were never intended to act as firemen.

The American Agriculturist.

For the best and most instructive agricultural and domestic reading; the most numerous and greatest common sense illustrations, we refer our farmers to the American Agriculturist, published by Orange Judd Company, at No. 245, Broadway, N. Y. Price $1.50 per annum in advance.

The Canadian Monthly.

The January number, just received, contains the usual varied and excellent table of contents, including instalments of the novels "Juliet" and "As Long as She Lived," and many cleverly written Conundrum.

Do those gentlemen in Ulsters wear trousers?

Trenton is also to have races some time in the month of February, on the ice at that place.

Recommended.

Our aspiring young artist, Fred Richardson, jr., has his gallery again in running order.

Narrow Escape.

A large stone over a window, of the burned building in Beeman's block, lately fell within a quarter of an inch of the devoted head of a passing citizen.

M. E. Missionary Meeting.

The annual missionary meeting will be held in the M. E. Church, Napanee, Sabbath evening, 28th inst. Sermon by Rev. I. B. Aylsworth, LL. B.

Madoc.

This enterprising village has taken the necessary steps towards becoming an incorporated village. The next step will be, "County Town of the North Riding of Hastings."

Skating Carnival.

Remember the Skating Carnival on Friday night the 2nd of February, on the Napanee skating rink. The Band and everything required to give pleasure and comfort to guests provided.

Races.

Brighton is to have grand Trotting Races on their driving park in that place, on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 20th and 21st of next month, at which some good purses are offered.

Wardens.

George Dennison, of Portland has been elected Warden of Frontenac; Benjamin Hubbs, of Picton Warden of Prince Edward; and James Walker, of Sidney, Warden of Hastings.

The Weather.

Last Saturday morning, we had a drizzling rain which stopped before noon, hardly enough to make a "January thaw," the following three days were very pleasant and mild.

Disorderly.

A Kingston "billy goat," was arrested for monopolizing Princess street and jarring the nerves of un-suspecting females, the strong re-buttling evidence against him, imposed a fine of $5 upon his owner.

Serious Accident.

On Wednesday morning, Mr. John Carscallen living a few miles below Napanee, received a serious kick in the side from a horse he was leading. Dr. Rutten who was called in is unable at present to ascertain the extent of his injuries.

Ontario Legislature.

The following is an analysis of the Ontario Legislature: 22 merchants, 15 agriculturists, 18 lawyers, 10 doctors, 5 lumbermen, 3 manufacturers, 3 journalists, 4 diarymen, 4 millers, 2 painters, and 1 blacksmith.

Frontenac Election.

Mr. R. M. Rose, the County Registrar, has received the writ for the holding of a new County election, and he has issued his proclamation. The nomination will take place on Monday, the 5th of February, and the election will be held a week later, Monday, the 12th.

Close Season.

We call attention to the close season for fish and game advertised in another column, by the Inspector, Mr. Ralston.

We have removed to our old store in the Perry Block, with a new stock of goods, (not smoked,) carefully selected from the best Manufactories, which we think will suit all. We hope to see all our old customers, and many new ones. A few of the old goods still on hand, which we offer at half their value. Come and see us in the east end of the Perry Block.

ROSE & FRALICK.

Decision Given.

Decision was given on Wednesday by his worship the Mayor, and John Webster, Esq., J. P., in the case of A. W. Grange, of the firm of Grange & Sill, upon complaint of Mr. G. B. Brila, Deputy Inspector of weights & measures for Lennox & Addington, for using the old wine measure for selling coal oil &c., which is contrary to Law, being unstamped. Fine $5, costs $4.80.

Must have cash at SPENCER'S.

Missionary Anniversary.

The Anniversary of the Napanee Branch of the Missionary Society, of the Methodist Church of Canada will be celebrated on Sunday and Monday next, the 28th.. and 29th inst. Sermons will be preached on behalf of the society, by the Rev. D. V. Lucas. The Anniversary Meeting will be held on Monday Evening, and will be addressed by the Rev. Dr. Douglas of Montreal, and Mr. Lucas the preacher of the Sabbath. Mr. Lucas made a very favourable impression when he visited this place some time since; those who heard him then will be sure to avail themselves of the privilege of hearing him both on Sunday and Monday, and as to Dr. Douglas, his reputation is too well established, as one of the finest pulpit and platform orators of the age. There is no necessity for anything more than the mere mention of his name required, to draw out a crowd.

THE FIRE ENGINE CONTEST IN KINGSTON.

THE MERRYWEATHER SURPASSED IN THREE TESTS BY THE CHATHAM ENGINE.

Friday afternoon last the final test of the Chatham fire engine before completing the purchase of it, took place on Market Square in presence of the Mayor, the most of the Aldermen, and a large crowd of spectators. The test was a most thorough one, and has resulted in the new steamer showing herself to be at least equal, if not superior, in every respect to the Merryweather, thus achieving a triumph for home manufacture. Among the spectators a good many practical engineers were engaged in watching the working of the two machines, and the general opinion of those competent to judge seemed to be that the Chatham engine is capable of doing all that is claimed for her.

At 2 o'clock. The two were started on equal terms, both having the fires built in them, with cold water in the boilers. The fires were started at two sharp. The Chatham engine was the first to move, and began to pump with 20 pounds pressure of steam in seven minutes. The Merryweather started in twelve minutes with 20 pounds of steam, and the Chatham engine having the start of five minutes, and by that time had on 80 pounds steam pressure, and pumping from the start two streams.

As soon as possible after steam was got up on both engines, the first test took place. To each engine there were attached two branches of hose, 400 feet long, and having  $\frac{1}{2}$  inches nozzles. These streams were used for a considerable time, and the result was in favour of the Chatham engine by about ten feet. The test consisted of both horizontal and perpendicular streams, and the result was about the same in both cases.

The second test was one stream through about 700 feet of hose on each engine, with  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch nozzles. The hose was run in a straight line up Brock street, and the branchmen stood on the crossing at King and Brock streets. This also resulted in favour of the Chatham engine by about 15 feet. The nozzles were changed—the Chatham engine taking that of the Merryweather and vice versa, and the distance thrown by each were nearly equal, but with her own nozzle the Chatham engine actually threw a greater distance by 20 or 25 feet.

The third test was the most difficult one. The steam consisted of one line of hose nearly 1,400 feet long, with  $\frac{1}{4}$  inch nozzles, and here the Chatham engine showed herself the best by 25 feet. The height achieved by the Chatham engine in this test was very nearly to the top of the

The Market Tolls were sold on Saturday last, at auction by Mr. Allan. The bidding was not very lively, commencing at $500, and being knocked down to Mr. Embury at $900, being $80 less than last year's price. Considerable stir was occasioned by one of the citizens who considered the Market By Law illegal, the Council not having the power to sell the Market Stalls and Tolls, and various other things; however, we can't see upon what grounds he made his assertions. We believe the Market Committee understands their business, as also do the councillors generally, and cannot believe they would commit any error in making the Market By-Law. We understand one of the Market stalls was sold to James Bell for $20. Mr. Embury, the purchaser of the Tolls, has proved himself during the last year a good hand at the business, having always looked sharp after dues, and promptly satisfied the claims of the Council. We wish him a successful year.

Bursted.

The firm called "Cheap John" doing business in Belleville for over a year past, and who has been selling goods at prices that honest dealers could not compete with, has at last "gone up," to the great satisfaction of the square traders in that town. The Journal of Commerce of the 12th, has the following:—"Very little sympathy will be felt for those who may lose by J. R. Winters of Belleville, otherwise known as "Cheap John," now reported as being in difficulties. The man's antecedents are most unfavorable, in fact such as to warn the most careless against dealings on credit, yet we believe several of our Montreal houses are creditors for considerable amounts. Winters turned up suddenly in Montreal somewhere over a year ago, and we believe had to leave San Francisco in a great hurry, not having time to take anything with him. For a short while he carried on an auction business on the Main street, being connected in some way with the Wolfs who were before the public at that time as having absconded from Jersey City with a large amount of goods which were brought here, and some of which were seized by American creditors who have traced them. Winters, however, soon removed to Belleville, where he took extensive premises, and has done a large business at prices admitting of no profit, as he had to pay top prices for his goods in Montreal, and sold at figures below what old established dealers could. The actual position of affairs is not yet fully known, but the result of such reckless trading can easily be imagined. We presume it will not be "ten regle" to accuse commercial agencies for the faults of this man, but had Montreal merchants paid heed to the warning of the agency of which we can speak knowingly, they would not now occupy the position they do in this matter."

These streams were used for a considerable time, and the result was in favour of the Chatham engine by about ten feet. The test consisted of both horizontal and perpendicular streams, and the result was about the same in both cases.

The second test was one stream through about 700 feet of hose on each engine, with  $\frac{1}{4}$  inch nozzles. The hose was run in a straight line up Brock street, and the branchmen stood on the crossing at King and Brock streets. This also resulted in favour of the Chatham engine by about 15 feet. The nozzles were changed—the Chatham engine taking that of the Merryweather and vice versa, and the distance thrown by each were nearly equal, but with her own nozzle the Chatham engine actually threw a greater distance by 20 or 25 feet.

The third test was the most difficult one. The steam consisted of one line of hose nearly 1,400 feet long, with  $\frac{1}{4}$  inch nozzles, and here the Chatham engine showed herself the best by 25 feet. The height achieved by the Chatham engine in this test was very nearly to the top of the flagstaff on the City Hall. The following is a summary of the steam and water pressures:

AVERAGE STEAM PRESSURE.

	Lbs.
Merryweather.....	125
Chatham Engine.....	85

AVERAGE WATER PRESSURE.

	Lbs.
Chatham Engine.....	160
Merryweather.....	140

It was remarkable that with less pressure of water the Merryweather burst, the hose three times and the Chatham engine not once, which is accounted for by the action of the pumps of the Chatham engine being regulated by a crank motion, and having a larger air chamber which gives a more even pressure of water—the water gauge of the Merryweather jumping 20 lbs. at each stroke of the pump, while there is no sudden movement of the Chatham engine's water gauge while pumping.

The test concluded about five o'clock, thus occupying about three hours, during which time the engines both did more work than ever they will have to do at fires.

The test of yesterday afternoon showed three things very clearly, viz., that the Chatham engine can get up steam quicker, throw water to a greater distance, and require less fuel than the Merryweather. Both engines started with an equal quantity of coal, and the Chatham engine was able to run for some seven minutes after the Merryweather had to stop for want of fuel. Those who were sceptical of the power of the home-made engine acknowledge that it has fairly beaten its rival.

The test was a most complete one, and both engineers got the most they could out of the engines. His Worship the Mayor being determined if the Chatham engine did not come up to the mark it should not be for want of a trial.

The above which we condense from the Daily News, speaks most decisively for the Canadian engine, one that stood side by side at the great Centennial and held her own against the most celebrated American machines in which the very

MERRYWEATHER SURPASSED IN THREE TESTS BY THE CHATHAM ENGINE.

Friday afternoon last the final test of e Chatham fire engine before complet-
g the purchase of it, took place on arket Square in presence of the Mayor,
e most of the Aldermen, and a large wd of spectators. The test was a st thorough one, and has resulted in e new steamer showing herself to be at st equal, if not superior, in every resct to the Merryweather, thus achiev-
g a triumph for home manufacture.

some of perfection may be said to have been reached, and, it now is a most exacting trial surpasses the well known Merryweather, one of the very best of English manufacture.

It must be gratifying to our twos-
people to know that we have the pioneer
of the Dominion, an A. L., of Chatham make, pronounced by judges to be unequalled, and which under the efficient management of our able engineer Dr. David Mair, has never been found wanting in the hour of danger.

MILL POINT.

(From our own Correspondent.)

We regret to learn that Chief Seth
Powlus is very ill.

Business dull. The Skating Rink
about the liveliest place in the village.

Our new councillors have taken their oaths of office, and we are anxiously looking forward to the time when our city fathers will reduce our taxes (and do
a great many other things promised us
before the election.

Mrs. James Wilson had a severe fall,
and is at present under the care of Dr.

it is expected.

A French wedding on Monday was the brightest thing experienced here for some time. The happy couple and numerous friends continued their jolification all day and night, and are probably at it yet.

A meeting was held in Rathbun Hall,
and committee appointed to organise a Young Men's Christian Association in this place.

In expectation of the immense quantity of Lemonade to be consumed here during next summer, the hotels are harvesting large quantities of ice. They intend to be prepared for Dunkin.

Mr. Jamieson has returned from the woods, after a three week's absence,
looking hale and hearty. He has commenced repairs on the Steamer Alexandria.

ADOLPHUSTOWN

MR. EDITOR:

I notice in the Beaver of the 6th inst.,
a note of some passing events of this place, given by "Observer," some of which are correct. Could it be possible that his eyes were blurred with potent
that day, or is it, "Old Sambo" waking up again, this time with the wool in his eyes, that he could not see all the improvements going on in the place, when some of them are so near those he has mentioned. Just a little ways from Mr.
Allison's new wharf, a small wharf is being built by J. J. Watson, Esq., for the accommodation of the little boats, (I am told,) which will be a great convenience
indeed. And again, I think he has done
the Ex-Reeve Mr. Watson, an injustice, when he says that the "Zeal" for municipal honor is dying out here, for whoso
"he" that is "observing," and has not seen the closing remarks of Mr. Watson's address of 1875. "And although a little tired of office now, I do not think I should hesitate long when called to represent
you again," don't that mean business
when the time comes, and I think Mr.
Watson means what he says.

Trade in Montreal dull almost to stagnation.

MONTREAL, Jan. 20.—Three hundred laborers, employed on No. 4 section Lachine-Canal, struck this morning and refused to work again unless paid their wages weekly. They refuse to allow other men to take their places, and threaten vengeance.

MONTREAL, Jan. 22.—On Saturday night, a wealthy farmer, aged about 60
supposed to be a Phillip Shevick, of St.
Lapue, was killed by a M. O. O. train.
He was on his way to market with a horse and sleigh, and fell into a dead
sleep, leaving his horse to make his way alone. The animal mistook the track for the road, leading into the city, and when the train came along, the horse and driver
were killed.

THOMAS'S ELECTRIC OIL
Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of
it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgment of the people for any great length of time. One of these is Thomas's ELECTRIC OIL purely a preparation of six of the best Oils known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Scientific physicians know that medicines may be
formed of several ingredients in certain
fixed proportions of greater power and
producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or
in different combinations. Thus in the preparation of this Oil a chemical change
takes place forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made
from any combination or proportions of
the same ingredients and entirely different from anything ever before made,
one which produces the most astonishing
results and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before
discovered. It contains no alcohol or other volatile liquids consequently loses
nothing by evaporation. Where applied
you get the benefit of every drop; whereas
with other preparation nearly all the
alcohol is lost in that way, and you get
only the small quantity of Oils which
they may contain.

At 2 o'clock. The two were started on equal terms, both having the fires built in them, with cold water in the boilers. The fires were started at two sharp. The Chatham engine was the first to move, and began to pump with 20 pounds pressure of steam in seven minutes. The Merryweather started in twelve minutes with 20 pounds of steam, and the Chatham engine having the start of five minutes, and by that time had on 80 pounds steam pressure, and pumping from the start two streams.

As soon as possible after steam was got up on both engines, the first test took place. To each engine there were attached two branches of hose, 400 feet long, and having  $\frac{1}{2}$  inches nozzles. These streams were used for a considerable time, and the result was in favour of the Chatham engine by about ten feet. The test consisted of both horizontal and perpendicular streams, and the result was about the same in both cases.

The second test was one stream through about 700 feet of hose on each engine, with  $\frac{1}{4}$  inch nozzles. The hose was run in a straight line up Brock street, and the branchmen stood on the crossing at King and Brock streets. This also resulted in favour of the Chatham engine, by about 15 feet. The nozzles were changed—the Chatham engine taking that of the Merryweather and vice versa, and the distance thrown by each were nearly equal, but with her own nozzle the Chatham engine actually threw a greater distance by 20 or 25 feet.

The third test was the most difficult one. The steam consisted of one line of hose near  $\frac{1}{4}$  inch long, with  $\frac{1}{4}$  inch nozzles, and here the Chatham engine showed herself the best by 25 feet. The height achieved by the Chatham engine in this test was very nearly to the top of the flag-staff on the City Hall. The following is a record of the steam and water pressures.

AVERAGE STEAM PRESSURE.

Merryweather.....	Lbs. 125
Chatham Engine.....	85.

AVERAGE WATER PRESSURE.

Chatham Engine.....	Lbs. 160.
Merryweather.....	140.

It was remarkable that with less pressure of water the Merryweather burst the hose three times and the Chatham engine not once, which is accounted for by the action of the pumps of the Chatham engine being regulated by a crank motion, and having a larger air chamber which gives a more even pressure of water—the water gauge of the Merryweather jumping 20 lbs. at each stroke of the pump, while there is no sudden movement of the Chatham engine's water gauge while pumping.

The test concluded about five o'clock, but occupying about three hours, during which time the engines both did more work than ever they will have to do at res.

The test of yesterday afternoon showed three things very clearly, viz., that the Chatham engine can get up steam quickly, throw water to a greater distance, and require less fuel than the Merryweather. Both engines started with an equal quantity of coal, and the Chatham engine was able to run for some seven minutes after the Merryweather had to stop for want of fuel. Those who were sceptical of the power of the home-made engine acknowledge that it has fairly beaten its rival.

The test was a most complete one, and the engineers got the most they could out of the engines. His Worship the Mayor being determined if the Chatham engine did not come up to the mark it could not be for want of a trial.

The above which we condense from the Daily News, speaks most decisively for the Canadian engine, one that stood by side at the great Centennial and did her own against the most celebrated American machines in which the very

Addresses will be delivered by several eminent gentlemen, and a large attendance is anticipated. Any persons wishing to attend and become members may obtain certificates by applying at once to the Secretary, Mr. J. C. Hegler, Ingersoll, on presentation of which, at the different railroad stations, they will be entitled, owing to special arrangements having been made with these companies, to tickets at one fare and a third, the double journey.—Ontario.

KINGSTON.

The Y. M. C. A., house warming at their new hall was a big affair.

On Thursday a convention will be held to select a Conservative candidate to contest the county for the vacancy created by the death of Mr. P. Graham. The writ was received this morning. The nomination has been fixed for Monday the 5th prox., and the polling for the 12th.

KINGSTON, Jan. 20.—The Conservatives of Frontenac met to-day to choose delegates to be present at a convention to be held of Thursday next and elect a candidate. Messrs William Murray and Thomas Dawson are still in the field as Independents. There was a lively personal discussion during and after the convention between two members.

MADOC.

HURON AND QUEBEC R. R. BY-LAW.—MADOC, Jan. 20.—Major Boulton, Vice-President of the Huron and Quebec Railway, has been here for the past week getting petitions signed asking the County Council of Hastings to submit a group by-law to grant a bonus of $75,000 to the Huron and Quebec Railway. The prospect of having that railway completed soon, gives general satisfaction and the by-law is likely to be carried by a large majority. It will be the means of thoroughly opening up for development one of the richest mineral districts in Ontario.

OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—Mr. Hugh Sutherland, Inspector of Public Works, Fort Garry is in town.

Edward Hawkins was to-day committed for trial for throwing cayenne pepper into Thomas A. Beckett's eyes.

The assessors have raised a man's taxes in that city $8000 as compared with last year.

A woman, was the cause of a quarrel between two gentlemen of Ottawa in which hard blows were struck, and the police wound up the affair in court.

A bed of Kaolin china clay, used for porcelain manufacture, has been discovered by Mr. W. L. Holland, several miles north of this city, but it is in a position which renders it inaccessible at present. The clay is fine, but the surface is impregnated with oxide of iron.

There is considerable excitement yet over the Hull mystery. The statement of the butcher is not credited, and this afternoon men are engaged in drawing the water out of the slide pond. The prisoners are still in custody. The Hull authorities, however, are not taking as active steps as they should to unravel the mystery.

There is also good reason to believe that a vein of silver four feet in width was discovered some time ago in the Gatineau district by a habitant who was unaware of its value. Nothing can be done with it until spring, as the snow is so deep that the land-marks showing the location of the lode are covered. The specimens of ore which have been brought from it are exceedingly rich.

very criticised municipal councils generally, for the careless manner in which they transacted important business.

THOMASE'S ECLECTRIC OIL
Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of
it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgment of the people for any great length of time. One of these is Thomas' ECLECTRIC OIL purely a preparation of
six of the best Oils known, each one
possessing virtues of its own. Scientific
physicians know that medicines may be
formed of several ingredients in certain
fixed proportions of greater power and
producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or
in different combinations. Thus in the preparation of this Oil a chemical change
takes place forming a compound which
could not be by any possibility be made
from any combination or proportions of
the same ingredients and entirely different from anything ever before made,
one which produces the most astonishing
results and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before
discovered. It contains no alcohol or
other volatile liquids consequently loses
nothing by evaporation. Where applied
you get the benefit of every drop; whereas
with other preparation nearly all the
alcohol is lost in that way, and you get
only the small quantity of Oils which
they may contain.

UNAired ROOMS.

I passed some houses in every town whose windows might as well be sealed with the walls for any purpose they have but to let in the light. They are never open summer and winter. In the winter it is cold; in the summer the flies get in, or, if netted, the dust sifts through the nets. Now I can tell a person who inhabits such chambers, when I see him in the street—there is such a smell about his clothing I always wish for a sniff of cologne or hartshorn, or burnt leather, or something of this sort to take the taste out. A house that is never aired has every nook and corner filled with stale odors of cooked meat, boiled vegetables, especially cabbage and onions, which, as the weeks go by, literally reek in their hiding places. The very garments of the children tell the same story of uncleanness. It is bad to have unwashed clothes, but there may be an excuse for it. But what excuse can there be for unaired ones, when air is so cheap and free? There is death in such unaired chambers. Better a swarm of flies or a cloud of dust; better frost or snow in a room than these intolerable smells. The first thing in the morning when you are ready to go down stairs, throw open your windows, tear apart the clothing of your beds, and let the air blow through it as hard as it will. There is health in such a policy.

WOOD-SHEDS.

Any farmer who has not a good woodshed makes a big mistake if he does not erect one at once. This winter the whole supply of wood can be cut to the proper length for burning, and piled under the woodshed, where it will season and be ready for use all summer. It will be dry and there will be no complaint from the women folks. The men will not have to get up early to chop firewood or if they come in from the harvest field they have not got to cut firewood before the day's work is over.

Again, if a rainy or snowy day comes, or several of them, they can be utilized, as the hired men can saw or chop and pile away the firewood. The woodshed is also a good place for rasping tools, making implements and fixing up things in general in rainy weather. Indeed there should be a work-shop in connection with every woodshed, where a full kit of carpenter's tools are kept for use, ready for any emergency; and a portable forge might be put in it to make and repair iron work, and thus save blacksmith bills.—Rural World.

GATHER PURE ICE.

An exchange admonishes its readers not to trust in the exploded theory that ice, formed from salt or impure water, is absolutely pure, and cites the case of a recent occurrence where the inmates of a hotel at Rye Beach were attacked by an epidemic of fever and diarrhoea, which was subsequently traced to the ice used in the establishment. This ice was collected from a pond, the outlet to which had become closed, and which was the receptacle of mud and sawdust from sawmills up the stream, with which it was connected. The ice was found to contain vegetable impurities, and when its use was abandoned the sickness disappeared.

Those who are storing and these who are consuming ice will do well to look well to the source whence their supplies are obtained. It should be remembered that ice made from water which is unfit to drink, is not fit to be used for cooking purposes, except it be used outside of vessels containing articles to be cooled.—Rural Home.

VARIOUS ITEMS.

Scarlet fever is very prevalent in different portions of Ontario at present.

The Belleville police difficulty has been settled. Petrie is "big Injun."

In the Ontario Legislature on the 10th inst., 98 petitions were presented in favor of Orange Incorporation.

The Bill for the incorporation of Belleville as a city was read a first time in the Legislature on the 17th.

The Ultramontanes in Montreal are busy just now writing down Free Masons as a body of very bad men.

The ice-harvesters who are on strike on the Hudson, are compelling the men engaged at the ice-houses to quit work.

During three months of this year the British railways have killed 264 persons and injured 1,166 others.

A large wild cat was trapped in North Ridge the other day. Numbers of these animals are being shot in the different portions of Western Ontario.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Rear Admiral Jose Smith, the oldest officer in the U. S. Navy, died here this morning. He was born in 1790.

HEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 17.—Thousands of lives snakes from twelve to eighteen inches long fell here during the heavy rain yesterday.

A citizen of Clark County, Ky., last week killed a pig which had no liver. The animal was in good condition and weighed 800 lbs.

The family-tree of a Texan family shows a branch on which several members have been hung for borrowing horses.

His hair was over the average length, and he wanted to know where curling was done. So some one sent him down to the Curling Rink.

"Did you do nothing to resuscitate the body?" was recently asked of a witness at a coroner's inquest. "Yes, sir; we searched the pockets," was the reply.

COMMITTED.—A man named Edward Long, charged with attempting to shoot George Mackie, of the Queen's Hotel, Port Hope, has been committed for trial.

INJURED HIS EIGHT.—Frank Hilliard, a pupil in one of the Peterboro' schools, was hit with a pen in the eye. It is now said that he will lose his sight.

BRANT and Oxford Counties have both pronounced in favor of the Dunkin Act, the former by 314 and the latter by 302 majorities.

Some Montreal Policemen were frightened from doing their duty in arresting thieves, who were at work in a grocery shop, by having a bottle of Ketchup thrown at them by the burglars.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 17.—Howe's London circus was levied on here to-day under attachment of the United States. The circus and menagerie are now in charge of the Sheriff, and will be sold on the 29th.

The Brookville Recorder goes so far in praising a local speculator as to say that a man who can advertise for 20,000 bass-wood saw logs, is worth more than a score of banks.

Much destitution exists among negroes in South Carolina, as planters are without the means of resuming work, owing to the refusal of merchants to advance funds during the present state of uncertainty.

A GENUINE DEAD BEAT.—A special from Montreal says: A man giving the name of Marten, from Brockville, is going around here soliciting aid for farmers in Olden township, Frontenac Co., who, he says, are starving because of bad crops and grasshoppers. He has no satisfactory

GATHER PURE ICE.

An exchange admonishes its readers not to trust in the exploded theory that ice, formed from salt or impure water, is absolutely pure, and cites the case of a recent occurrence where the inmates of a hotel at Rye Beach were attacked by an epidemic of fever and diarrhoea, which was subsequently traced to the ice used in the establishment. #### TEA VS. ALCOHOL.

Ex-Surgeon-General Francis, of the British army in India, writes thus warmly in favor of cold tea as superior to any alcoholic or malt beverage, when sustained physical vigor is requisite:—"A few years ago I accompanied a well known Nimrod on a tiger shooting expedition. My friend, a man of keen nervous temperament and in excellent health, had been recommended always to drink bitter beer twice a day. I drank nothing but cold tea throughout our trip. Every evening, shortly after dinner, my companion turned in quite exhausted, while I read or wrote till midnight, rising at five quite fresh. I could adduce from my own experience, extending over many years in a tropical climate, several other witnesses. Tea is not followed by the depression which, as a rule, succeeds in the case of alcoholic stimulants."

WHY DO ANIMALS NEED SALT?

Prof. James Johnston, of Scotland, says:—Upward of half the saline matter of blood (57 per cent.) consists of common salt, and this is partly discharged every day through the skin and kidneys, so that the necessity of continued supplies of it to the healthy body becomes sufficiently obvious. The bile also contained soda (one of the ingredients of salt as a special constituent,) and so do all cartilages of the body. Stint the supply of salt, therefore, and neither will the bile be able properly to assist digestion nor the cartilages to build up again fast as they naturally waste. It is better to place salt, where stock can have free access to it than to give it occasionally in large quantities. They will help themselves to what they need if not allowed to do so at pleasure; otherwise, when they become "salt hungry," they may take more than is wholesome.

WATERING HORSES.

"A Horse Lover" urges in the Times the necessity of watering horses sufficiently. "For 20 years," he says "we have kept in our stables an average of 10 horses. We have never known a day's illness among them. Several are over 30 years of age and capable of any amount of work. We attribute this entirely to my daily visit to the stable, when I always find either a trough or pail full of water within reach of each horse. By this means I know that at least once a day they are able fully to quench their thirst. I never had dealings with a coachman who refused to let his horse drink."

COMMITTED.—A man named Edward Long, charged with attempting to shoot George Mackie, of the Queen's Hotel, Port Hope, has been committed for trial.

INJURED HIS EYE.—Frank Hilliard, a pupil in one of the Peterboro' schools, was hit with a pen in the eye. It is now said that he will lose his sight.

BRANT and Oxford Counties have both pronounced in favor of the Dunkin Act, the former by 314 and the latter by 302 majorities.

Some Montreal Policemen were frightened from doing their duty in arresting thieves, who were at work in a grocery shop, by having a bottle of Ketchup thrown at them by the burglars.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 17.—Howe's London circus was levied on here to-day under attachment of the United States. The circus and menagerie are now in charge of the Sheriff, and will be sold on the 29th.

The Brookville Recorder goes so far in praising a local speculator as to say that a man who can advertise for 20,000 bass-wood saw logs, is worth more than a score of banks.

Much destitution exists among negroes in South Carolina, as planters are without the means of resuming work, owing to the refusal of merchants to advance funds during the present state of uncertainty.

A GENUINE DEAD BEAT.—A special from Montreal says: A man giving the name of Marten, from Brockville, is going around here soliciting aid for farmers in Olden township, Frontenac Co., who, he says, are starving because of bad crops and grasshoppers. He has no satisfactory credentials.

LOOK OUT FOR THEM.—Three card monte men are now said to be playing their avocation on the G. T. R. Those who avoid these worthies will find it beneficial to their interests to do so, as nothing is to be gained by coming in contact with such persons.

Henry Ward Beecher and Theodore Tilton lunched at the same counter in the depot dining rooms at Utica, Wednesday noon, but did not recognize each other. Both were journeying westward, Beecher to speak on "The Ministry of Wealth" as Rome, and Tilton to solve "The Problem of Life" at Oneida.

Fun (snow-shovellers):—Tom—"Hulloa, Bill, how's your mate Jack?" Bill—"Oh, 'e's dead, poor old Jack is through catchin' a cold a sweepin' up the snow." Tom—"Poor chap, hi am sorry. Ah well! 'e won't 'ave to sweep up no snow where 'e's gone to."

Mr. Holly, the pump inventor, will soon attempt to heat the whole city of Lockport with steam. The city is to be divided into districts, and each to have its separate boiler. Mains from each boiler are to run to the different houses, and all the occupant has to do is to turn on a faucet and obtain all the heat he wants.

FOREST FIRES.—In the discussion of the subject the parties most interested (the lumbermen), seem to know full well how these dreadful fires originate, which as they say, is the result of gross carelessness on the part of our working people in their ordinary avocations in the woods, such as driving along the tributaries, and in exploring the woods looking up timber, leaving smouldering fires behind them.

Among the replies to an advertisement of a music committee for "a candidate as organist, music teacher," etc., was the following:—"Gentlemen, I noticed your advertisement for an organist and music teacher, either lady or gentleman. Having been both for several years, I offer you my services."

THE HAMILTON Times says:—Judging from the tone of our exchanges, it is the Tory press that is the most bitter in its opposition to the Dunkin Act, being enforced in any part of Ontario. When, however, they attack that measure as tyrannical and unjust, let them bear in mind that Mr. Dunkin, who framed the Act, was a member of Sir John's Tory Government.

By this means I know that at least once a day they are able fully to quench their thirst. I never had dealings with a coachman who did not think it a risk to let his horses have more than modicum of water. I would just add that we have not such a thing as a bearing-rein in our harness-room and I always drive without blinkers."

LEMON PUDDING.—Pare three lemons and take out the pits; put them in a basin with half a pound of sugar, and mix well roll a long strip of paste; lay the mixture on with a spoon; roll and boil the same as custardy pudding. Oranges may be used with the addition of half a lemon. Cranberries or stewed fruits of any kind either fresh or dried may be used the same way.

BOILED GOOSE. Dress and singe it, put it into a deep dish, cover it with boiling milk and leave it over night. In the morning wash of the milk, and put the goose into cold water on the fire; when boiling hot take it off, wash it in warm water, and dry with a cloth. This process takes out the oil. Fill the body with a dressing of bread crumbs: seasoned with pepper, salt, butter, and two chopped onions if relished, and a little sage. Put the goose into cold water and boil gently until tender. Serve with giblet sauce, and with pickles, or acid jellies.

OX-TAIL SOUP.—Two tails, if large, three if small, will make a large tureen of soup. Divide them at the joints; rub them with salt, and soak well in lukewarm water, place the tails in a stew-pan, with four onions, a bunch of parsley two dozen Jamaica or black pepper-corns a sliced turnip, carrot, and three quarts water. When the meat is tender, which will be in about two and a-half hours, cut it up into very small pieces. Thicken the soup with a little brown flour rubbed up with a ladleful of the fat; strain it into a clean stew-pan, put in the cut meat, boil and skim, season with a tablespoonful of mushroom catsup, and pepper to the taste.

Tilton lunched at the same counter in the depot dining rooms at Utica, Wednesday noon, but did not recognize each other. Both were journeying westward, Beecher to speak on "The Ministry of Wealth" as Rome, and Tilton to solve "The Problem of Life" at Oneida.

When, however, they attack that measure as tyrannical and unjust, let them bear in mind that Mr. Dunkin, who framed the Act, was a member of Sir John's Tory Government."

The Sporting Times states that there is a likelihood of another Polar Expedition being fitted out next summer. It is to be a private undertaking, set on foot by the united yacht clubs of the Kingdom. Each club has guaranteed a subscription, and the scheme has advanced so far that the distinguished geographer, Dr. Peterman is now in London for the purpose of consulting with the promoters of the expedition on the best route to be adopted.

A WILD MAN.—Last week a man was lodged in our county jail who was reported to be the "wild man of the woods." He has been living in the woods near Langton during the entire winter, sleeping without cover or protection of any kind, except that which the woods afforded, and exposed to the bitter cold weather, with but a few rags of clothing on him. A charge was lodged against him living without any visible means of support, and he was ordered to be placed in the common jail for three months at hard labor. He was captured with considerable difficulty, as he is very light on foot, and can jump over an ordinary fence without touching his hands to it. He had in his possession when captured an axe which he used for cutting wood to build his fires with and cook his frugal meals. From appearance he is about forty years of age, with black hair and whiskers, and when he was lodged in jail he was so filthy a person could scarcely tell whether his original color was white or black. He appears to know very little about himself; he says he came from across the waters, and thinks his native country was Ireland. His brogue indicates that. He don't know how old he is or how long he has been in this country; knows nothing about his parents; says he has lived in the woods ever since he came to this country. He had on his person twenty-six cents in money and some tobacco.—Norfolk Reformer, January 11.
